Kimwana Eve I'm not trying to start no sh!t. But this question has been asked and white people had a problem with this question. Is it safe to say b/c the woman asking is white it's all good, or have all those who had an issue prior, have had some type of awakening? 👍❤️ 12

Like · Reply · 4d

Rachael Petty Author Solid question.

Like · Reply · 4d

Rachael Petty Author Maybe a mix of both? I think now is a time a lot of white people who were silent/unaware of their own prejudice before are having a hard time ignoring it. I'm aware now that others have put this question in. Will be going back to look at previous postings of this question!

If you want a list of where to shop for yourself that's fine - but there is no reason for you to build and manage a website, a platform that you can eventually monetise.
I am trying to understand why you would think you should do this. 👍 5

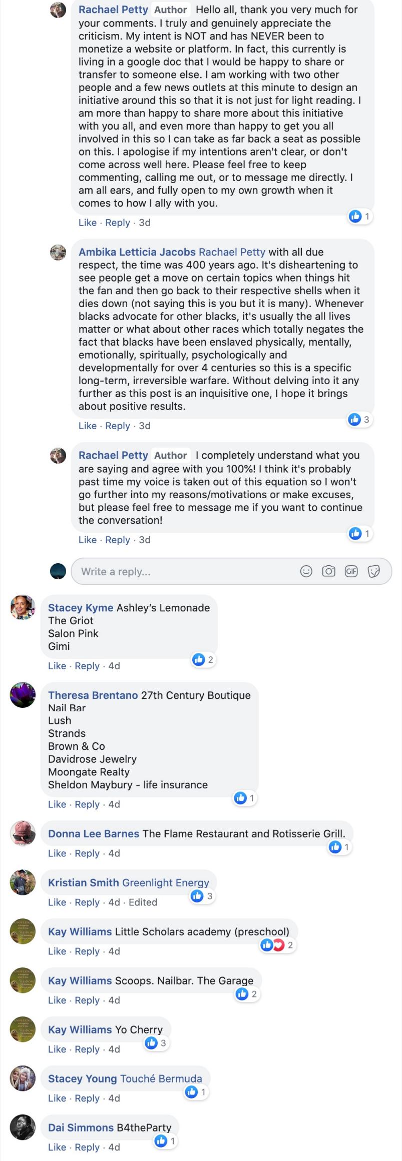
Katura Horton-Perinchief What fresh hell? I DISTINCTLY remember people coming for every black person who has asked about black owned businesses for YEARS on this list. But #allrestaurantsmatter and #allbusinessesmatter. You all know this list means you actually have to SHOP here and INVEST in black businesses right? 👍❤️ 6

Like · Reply · 3d



Rachael Petty Author Hello all, thank you very much for your comments. I truly and genuinely appreciate the criticism. My intent is NOT and has NEVER been to monetize a website or platform. In fact, this currently is living in a google doc that I would be happy to share or transfer to someone else. I am working with two other people and a few news outlets at this minute to design an initiative around this so that it is not just for light reading. I am more than happy to share more about this initiative with you all, and even more than happy to get you all involved in this so I can take as far back a seat as possible on this. I apologise if my intentions aren't clear, or don't come across well here. Please feel free to keep commenting, calling me out, or to message me directly. I am all ears, and fully open to my own growth when it comes to how I ally with you.

Ambika Letticia Jacobs Rachael Petty with all due respect, the time was 400 years ago. It's disheartening to see people get a move on certain topics when things hit the fan and then go back to their respective shells when it dies down (not saying this is you but it is many). Whenever blacks advocate for other blacks, it's usually the all lives matter or what about other races which totally negates the fact that blacks have been enslaved physically, mentally, emotionally, spiritually, psychologically and developmentally for over 4 centuries so this is a specific long-term, irreversible warfare. Without delving into it any further as this post is an inquisitive one, I hope it brings about positive results.

Rachael Petty Author I completely understand what you are saying and agree with you 100%! I think it's probably past time my voice is taken out of this equation so I won't go further into my reasons/motivations or make excuses, but please feel free to message me if you want to continue the conversation!

Jessie Moniz Hardy ☕ Rachael Petty what are you planning to do with this information? Are you building a website?

Like · Reply · 3d 2

Katura Horton-Perinchief Tanaya J D Tucker has already started building a list based on feedback and I believe that is still going. I suggest you start there. Because this whole thing is ICKY af. This is not a fad for any of us. Not a costume. And this building a list of black businesses to assuage white guilt because somehow you all decided not to hashtag #allrestaurantsmatter and #allbusinessesmatter FOR A WEEK OUT OF YOUR LIVES is NOT okay. We appreciate ALL dollars. We appreciate ALL business. But let's be real. White folk having an awakening and all of a sudden wanting to create black empowerment spaces where they already exist because they're finally hashtagging that #blacklivesmatter while we've been doing it since Trayvon was still alive is infuriating to anyone paying attention.

Hannah Collins This. White people have been so critical of such lists/directories already maintained by Black people, such as The Bermuda Black Dollar and Black Bermudian Owned Business Directory, and as mentioned in this thread, previous lists on MAJ's and People's List.
We do need to support Black businesses. We need to also recognize the resources that are already out there, and as white people, when we get feedback from Black people that what we're doing is offensive or inappropriate, we need to listen and course correct.
I am aware of 2 Black women who are now working on such lists, and I see that Danielle of The Nab App has just published a list on her Blog.
Rachael Petty my suggestion to you would be, once you have compiled your research / categorized your list, to reach out and see how you can be of assistance to the Black people who are leading these efforts. Hand over your list to them and let them run with it. I do believe that Black people should hold ownership of any list of Black owned businesses. It is of them, by them, and for them. As white people we can then be sure to amplify THEIR platforms and support THEM, but we should not be making ourselves the heroes in this story. Not at all.

Like · Reply · 3d 8

Hannah Collins Rachael Petty As Katura mentions above, Tanaya J D Tucker is working on a list already, and I know that Vee Ebun Bee, who is a web developer, is definitely interested in pushing this initiative forward.
I KNOW there is a way that we can see a solution that is just, equitable, informative for all, and takes your (I believe to be well-intentioned) action-driven work AWAY from White-centricity.
Let Black people own Black data.

Rachael Petty Author That was always my plan, but in the process of trying to get there, I accidentally centered my own voice. But it has been passed to Vee and I know it is being run with, and I'm just happy to help if I can. But I completely agree with you, have agreed with you, will continue to agree with you on this.

Elaine Brown Another question and please educate me- what is the plan for non black owned businesses that have black employees?
Or white parents of black children?
I mean the point is to be conscientious spenders- there may be unintentional negative repercussions for some.
